The Competitive Arena

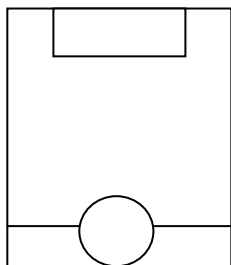

Learning objective: The coach will acquire ideas on how to make simple training exercises more competitive for both individual players and their teams. While competitiveness may be partially innate, the coach will learn how he/she can create a competitive environment in training that will enhance the growth and development of a more competitive and effective player.

A recent article by Jay Martin, NSCAA Soccer Journal Editor and Ohio Wesleyan University Coach, on creating a more competitive player sparked intense discussion in the coaching community. Most agreed that we are creating better technical players but not necessarily sufficiently competitive players.
